ENGLISH and CHINESE DICTIONARY,

COMPILED FROM

THE LATEST AND BEST AUTHORITIES, AND CONTAIN-ING ALL WORDS IN COMMON USE, WITH MANY EXAMPLES OF THEIR USE.

NEW EDITION, THOROUGHLY REVISED, AND GREATLY ENLARGED AND IMPROVED BY THE ADDITION OF A CLASSIFIED LIST OF MISCELLANEOUS TERMS, A NUMBER OF MISCELLANEOUS SENTENCES, SOME FORMS OF LETTERS, NOTES, AND PETITIONS, A TABLE OF DISTANCES, THE TARIFF OF IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF CHINA, THE LATEST IMPROVEMENT ON THE COM-MERCIAL TREATY BETWEEN CHINA &
FOREIGN COUNTRIES, & A HISTORICAL
SKETCH OF THE CHINESE DYNAS-TIES, IN WHICH THE DATES ARE HARMONIZED WITH THE CHRISTIAN
CHRONOLOGY.

BY KWONG KI CHIU,

LATE MEMBER OF THE CHINESE EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION IN THE UNITED STATES, AND AUTHOR OF "DICTIONARY OF ENGLISH PHRASES"; "SERIES OF CONVERSATION BOOKS"; "MANUAL OF CORRESPONDENCE AND SOCIAL USAGES";
"COMPREHENSIVE GEOGRAPHY," ETC.

In presenting the book to the public, a few words concerning the author's previous efforts in the same direction may not be inappropriate. In 1868 he published a small English and Chinese Lexicon, containing about eight thousand words,—with an added list embracing the names of the most familiar articles, and the common terms of daily life; to which were appended some familiar conversational phrases. The unexpectedly large circulation of that book was most gratifying, as showing the public need and appreciation of such a work.

A revised edition of that work, enlarged by the addition of four thousand words, was published in 1875. The appended lists were also enlarged, many miscellaneous words and expressions in common use being added. Some forms of letters for commercial correspondence were inserted in that edition, as was also a Chinese chronological table. The sales of that book seemed to indicate that it was more serviceable to Chinese students of English than any thing before published.

With these proofs of the demand for books of this class, and with the gratifying testimony that the previous editions had met a popular want, it seemed best to the author to undertake another work of similar character but on a much larger scale, and more complete.

A superior opportunity for this was afforded him by his appointment in 1875, as a member of the Chinese Educational Commission established at Hartford, Connecticut, in the United States. The author resided there for eight years where he had access to the best aids to the study of the language, and enjoyed the highest facilities for the execution of such a work.

He has accordingly prepared this book which is much fuller than the previous ones.

The number of words and phrases inserted is much increased, and the list of miscellaneous words much enlarged in this edition; while the classification of the words themselves has been made more minute and accurate. To many of them explanatory definitions or synonyms have been added, an advantage which will be readily appreciated. The forms for commercial correspondence and the chronological table have been revised with much care.

It should be stated that in translating the English, the simple and easily understood form of Chinese, has been employed, in preference to any particular dialect, for obvious reasons.

With these explanations, the author commits the work to the public fondly hoping that it will meet their needs more fully than the previous editions, and that it will do its part in leading both the English people and the Chinese people to a more thorough acquaintance with each other's language and literature.

 Wrong-doer 害人者, 犯罪者, 行惡者.
 Wrong-doing 作惡, 犯罪.
 Wrongful 害人的, 虧負人的, 不公道.
 Wrong-headed 執迷的.
 Wrongly 錯, 差.
 Wrought iron 熟鐵.
 Wrought silk 熟絲.
 Wry 歪, 不平, 欹斜.
 a wry mouth 歪口.
 a wry face 面不正.
 Wry-neck 歪頸.

Y

Yacht 快舟, 快艇.
 Yan 大薯.
 Yang-tsz-kiang 洋子江, 長江.
 Yankee 美國北省人, 美國人.
 Yard, 碼, (英國三尺即華二尺四寸) 帆杠.
 Yard, in a house 天井, 天階.
 a timber-yard 木料棧.
 Yarn 紗.
 cotton-yarn 棉紗.
 linen-yarn 蔴紗.
 Yawn 張口打呵聲.
 Yawn, to 打呵, 張口打呵.
 why does he yawn? 因何他張口打呵.
 Ye 汝們, 汝等.
 Yea 是也, 然, 就是, 諾.
 yea or nay 是或不是, 然或不然.
 Yeap, to bring forth young as sheep 產羊子.
 Year 年, 歲, 載.
 last year 往年, 舊年, 去歲, 上年.
 next year 來年, 明年, 下年.
 every year 年年.
 year by year 歲歲.
 a year of age 年紀, 年歲.
 the close of a year 年晚.
 the new year's day 元旦.
 every other year 隔一年.

a year ago 年前.
 the year before last 上前年.
 a man of years 老邁者.
 a bad year 凶年, 饑歲.
 a year of plenty 豐年, 樂歲.
 a whole year 週年, 十二個月.
 a leap-year 逢閏年, 有閏月之年.
 stricken in years 年邁.
 Yearling 一歲之獸.
 Yearly 年年, 每年.
 Yearn, to 仰慕, 羨慕不已, 慕甚.
 Yeast 酵.
 a yeast cake 酒餅.
 Yeasty, frothy 浮泡.
 Yell, to 大聲呼, 大喊, 厲聲呼.
 Yellow 黃, 黃色.
 the yellow fever 黃熱症, 瘟疫症.
 Yellowish 淡黃色, 畧黃色.
 Yelp, to 大聲吠.
 Yeoman 凡夫, 庶民.
 Yes 諾, 是, 係, 唯唯.
 Yesterday 昨日.
 day before yesterday 前日.
 yesterday-night 昨夜.
 Yet 尚, 尚且, 到底, 猶, 仍, 會.
 not yet 未曾.
 yet a few days 還有數日.
 not come yet 未曾來.
 Yield, to 服, 降服, 退讓, 出產, 准從, 遵.
 to yield one's self up 自行投到.
 to yield the path 讓道.
 to yield a place 讓位.

to yield fruit 生菓。
 to yield to circumstances 自屈, 屈己
 Yield 所產者, 所生者。 [許。
 Yielding 柔順, 禮讓, 謙退, 生產,
 Yoke 軛, 牛軛。
 to be under the yoke 當奴僕, 爲奴
 Yoke-fellow } 偕耦者, 匹配者。
 Yoke-mate }
 Yoke, to 駕軛, 上軛。
 Yon { 僅能望見之遠處, 彼
 Yonder } 處。
 Yolk 蛋黃。
 Yore 昔, 古時。
 You 爾, 爾等。
 Young 幼, 少, 嫩。 young and strong 少壯。 when young 少年時。
 when I was young 我當少年時。
 Young, the offspring of animals 子。 a young person 少者, 年輕人。 an elegant young woman 少女。 young paddy 禾苗。 Younger 更幼。 younger brother 弟。
 Youngest 至幼。
 Youngish 畧少, 稍幼。
 Youngling 少者, 嫩獸。
 Youngster 童子。
 Your 汝的, 汝們的。
 your father 令尊, 尊翁。
 Your-self 汝自己。
 Youth 後生, 童子。
 Youthful 少時的, 年少的, 嫩。
 Youthfully 少年的, 嫩。

Yunnan province 雲南。

Z

Zax 開石板之鑿。
 Zeal 慇懃之心, 憤心, 憤力。
 Zealot 慇懃行事者, 狂妄者, 空
 想者。
 Zealous 狂烈, 發憤, 慇懃, 憤力
 Zealously 憤心。
 Zealousness 憤心。
 Zebra 斑馬。
 Zedoary 良羌
 Zenith 天頂, 天心。
 Zephyr 西風, 薰風。
 Zest 佳味者, 檸檬皮, 陳皮之類
 Zine 白鉛。
 Zodiac 黃道, 日所行之道。
 Zone 腰帶, 帶, 地球之帶, 道。
 the five zones 五帶。
 the torrid zone 熱帶。
 the temperate zones 溫帶。
 the frigid zones 寒帶。
 Zoography 生物總論, 詳論生物
 之形體性格。
 Zoological 生物的, 禽獸各類生物
 的。
 Zoological garden 禽獸及各類生物
 園。
 Zoologist 考究生物博士。
 Zoology 生物總類。
 Zootomy 剖析生物之法。

ELEMENTS OF NATURAL SCIENCE. 博物之理

On the property of bodies.

Matter may be changed, but not destroyed.

Matter has cohesive attraction.

It has also the property of repulsion.

There is a mutual affinity in bodies.

Metals attract and unite with metal.

Water, or aqueous bodies, attract water.

Air, or aeriform bodies, attract air.

The power of attraction is great or small

The sun attracts the earth.

The earth attracts the moon.

The moon attracts the tides.

The earth attracts every thing to itself,

Bodies gravitate to the earth not from it.

Bodies are at rest or in motion.

Rapid motion cannot instantly cease.

Nor can bodies at rest, be put into motion at once

Inertia and momentum are antagonistic.

Rapid motion quickly checked is dangerous.

A horse stopping suddenly, the rider falls forward

On moving suddenly, the rider falls backward

Collision injures according to the rate of motion

物質, 物性

物質能變而不能滅盡

物有牽合之性

物亦有推拒之性

物質同者喜牽合

金質牽合金質

水質牽引水質

氣質牽引氣質

牽引之力有大 有小

日牽引地球

地球牽引月輪

月牽引潮水

地牽引附地諸物

物向地不能離地

物有動靜二性

動極不能即止

靜者不能即動

靜動之力勝負相對

動極驟止則傷

馳馬驟止騎馬人向前墜下

馬驟馳騎馬人向後墜下

兩物撞觸動速者必傷

The Atmosphere.

Its height is about 150 Chinese le,

The higher it is from the earth, the lighter it becomes.

The atmosphere is composed of oxygen and nitrogen.

From supporting life, it is called vital air.

The two gases are blended in fixed proportions

Oxygen is so called from its nourishing qualities

Nitrogen simply dilates the oxygen.

地球周圍之氣

地氣能上升一百五十華里

氣離地面愈遠愈輕

養氣淡氣合爲地氣

生物倚賴而生故名生氣

養氣淡氣調和有定度

養育萬物名養氣

淡氣只使養氣淡些

In 1000 parts of air there is one of carbon.
Carbon is emitted in expiration.
It is also the result of combustion.
Inspiring only carbon would be fatal.
Vegetation (on the contrary) lives upon it.
In the air there is also aqueous vapour.
It is most abundant in hot damp weather.
At night it is condensed and forms dew.
The atmospheric pressure.
Supports mercury to the height of 28 inches
And water to the height of 32 feet.
The air presses equally in all directions.
Man is therefore unconscious of its weight.
The air in rapid motion is wind.
Its strength corresponds to its motion.
The heat of the sun causes the air to ascend.
Fresh air immediately supplies its place.

生氣千分內有炭氣一分
炭氣由肺呼出 物焚亦燒出炭氣 人獨吸炭氣則死
草木藉炭氣而生 氣中有水汽 天熱雨多則汽多
水汽夜遇冷則成露 地氣有壓重之力 托高管內水銀廿八英寸 托高管內之水三十二英尺 地氣壓力周圍勻同
壓力勻故人不覺 地氣速動則成風 風之大小係依氣之緩急 日熱則令地氣上升 隨時有氣補其空缺

The Air-pump.
The round glass cylinder.
The pump empties the air in the cylinder.
Any living thing within, then dies.
A butterfly is unable to fly.
A lighted candle is extinguished.
A bell gives out no sound.
Gunpowder will not ignite.
A coin and a feather fall together.

抽風之器名氣機筒 器上用玻璃圓罩
機筒抽出罩內之氣
納生物於罩內則死
納蝶於罩內則不飛
納火於罩內即滅
納鈴於罩內則無聲
納火藥於罩內不燒 罩內無氣錢毛一齊墜落

The Barometer.
The mercury is placed in a tube.
If any air enters it is useless.
The mercury rises in fine weather.
Its fall indicates bad weather.
Its changes depend on atmospheric pressure

風雨針 水銀貯玻璃管內 外氣泄入則不應 水銀升則天晴 水銀降則風雨 升降全靠地氣壓力之輕重

A sudden fall indicates a storm.

To mariners and farmers it is most valuable.

The Thermometer.

Both ends of a glass tube are closed.

The mercury is in the bulb.

It contracts and expands according to the temperature

As it expands it rises, and vice versa.

A table indicates the degrees.

32 is the freezing point.

60 to 70 neither hot nor cold.

96 blood or great heat.

110 fever heat.

212 the boiling point.

Hydrogen or light gas.

Air-balloon.

Hydrogen is much lighter than air.

Carburetted hydrogen or coal gas.

The safety lamp prevents explosion when one goes down the shaft.

Heat and light are imponderable.

There are six kinds of heat.

Natural or solar heat.

Fire or artificial heat.

Electric or galvanic heat.

Animal heat.

Heat from chemical changes.

Heat from friction.

All bodies have their own natural heat.

They also receive and radiate heat.

Heat is radiated equally in all directions.

There are good and bad radiators of heat.

Those that receive it easily radiate it easily.

水銀忽降指有大風雨
海客農視夫此爲至寶

寒暑針

玻璃管口兩端皆閉

管底貯有水銀

水銀因寒則縮因熱則漲

漲則升縮則降

玻璃管旁號識度數 [結成冰

水銀降至三十二度時水則凝

六七十度寒暑適中

人血本熱九十六度

熱病一百十度

沸湯熱二百十二度

輕氣

輕氣球

輕氣比地氣輕數倍

炭氣輕氣即煤炭氣

携燈籠入煤井方免毒氣焚着

熱與光不能以權稱之

熱有六樣

日熱

火熱

電氣熱

肉身熱即本然熱

化成之熱

二物相擊成之熱

各物皆有本然之熱

物能接熱能傳散熱

熱傳散四週均勻

物質傳散熱有難易

接熱易者出熱亦易

All metals are good conductors of heat.
 Wood, stone, glass, are bad conductors.
 Wright and smooth surfaces reflect heat.
 Rough and black surface readily absorbs it.
 Bodies are either solid, or fluid, aeriform.
 The natural heat of each is different.
 Solids by increase of heat may be changed into fluids.

Fluids also into gases.

Every thing is expanded by heat.

The vapor of boiling water is steam.

The property of steam is expansive.

When confined its expansive power is ^{very} great.

Heat adds to its power.

Steam power is extensively employed.

It is the moving power of the steamer.

And the steam engine or locomotive.

Solar light.

It travels with immense velocity.

In a direct or straight course.

It is deflected by water or glass.

Like heat it may be reflected.

The moon is reflected light.

A prism decomposes solar light.

White or colourless light is the union ^{of seven} tints.

Heat always accompanies solar light.

It is found in the red coloured ray.

Colour of objects is reflected light.

Black is the absorption of all the tints.

White is the entire reflection of them.

The rainbow.

The rain in sun shine acts like a prism.

The telescope.

The microscope.

五金傳熱最易

木石玻璃傳熱甚難

物面光滑能返照熱

物粗礪色黑接熱易

物分實質水質氣質

三質本然之熱不同

實質添熱變為水質

水質添熱質為氣質

各物得熱則發大

沸湯變氣名為蒸汽

蒸汽性散而不聚

蒸汽被束則力極大

汽加火熱力更大

汽力之用甚大

汽力運行輪船

汽力亦運行火車

日光

光行至速無物可比

光直射

光透玻璃或清水斜射

光能返照

月光係日光返照

日光透三角鏡分為七色

日光七色合為白

日熱常與日光並行

熱寓於紅光內

各物色係日光返照

物全接日光則色黑

物不接日光則色白

虹霓

日光透雨則成虹霓

大小千里鏡

大小顯微鏡

The camera.

A concave lens.

A convex lens.

The former causes light to diverge.

The latter brings it to a focus.

Electricity.

Electrical machine.

The loadstone.

The magnet.

Magnetic wire.

The compass.

The indicator or needle.

Electricity of the earth.

Electricity of the clouds.

Electric state undisturbed.

Electric state excited.

The electric fluids are negative and positive.

When separated they strongly attract ^{each} other.

Concussion of electric clouds is thunder.

Lightning is the electric flash,

Thunder is harmless, lightning dangerous.

It is most dangerous when they are together.

收景鏡

凹鏡

凸鏡

凹鏡透光令光展開

凸鏡透光成尖樞

電氣

電機器

攝石

攝鐵

電氣傳鐵線有攝力

指南盤

地體之電氣

天雲之電氣

電氣和則靜

電氣不和則亂動

電氣具陰陽二性

陰陽離必牽引復合

電氣在雲中觸擊爲雷

閃係電氣所射之火光

殺人非雷是電火

閃電雷聲齊發爲最險

out of temper, I did not speak to him.

若汝不停說話我當罰汝 If you keep talking in that way I shall punish you.

今晨我睡醒時，天甚黑暗 It was quite dark when I awoke this morning.

他說誤拈我卷書，我知確 他是有意拈去 He said he took my book by mistake, but I am sure he did it on purpose.

我說他騙我，他即發怒 He lost his temper when I told him that he had cheated me.

莫阻我路 Don't stand in my way.

我已聞此事，汝無庸再說我
知 I have already heard this and so you need not tell me about it again.

我說他知，聞他不久娶妻，他
即微笑 He smiled when I told him I had heard that he was going to be married.

若十點鐘汝不到此間，我不
候汝 If you are not here at ten o'clock

A. C. Esq.,

Captain Superintendent of Police,

Sir,

I beg to inform you that about midnight on Saturday last, I saw two suspicious-looking persons. One was behind the back wall of my house, and the other on the road about ten paces off. I feel convinced that they were there for the purpose of committing a burglary.

I saw nothing in their possession except a short bamboo but I immediately sounded a gong in the window of the second story.

This aroused the neighbourhood and the two men immediately ran away.

Your obedient servant,

Tsik Hau Tong of the clan Kwong make and issue this lease, hereby declaring, that they are the owners of a shop situated in Young Hong Street of the city of Canton, facing the south.

It is two entries in depth, and 19 rows of tiles in breadth; the roof of the building, the rooms, terrace, windows, doors and counting room are all complete.

It is now leased to Mr. Wong Ping to be opened as a dry goods store with the sign Ye Wo.

It is distinctly understood that the rent shall be 150 taels each year, whole dollars, weighed according to the standard balances of the Government; two dollars shall also be paid each year for shoe-money; the rent for the intercalary months is to be reckoned the same as that for the other months; also a deposit of (Tls.200) two hundred taels is to be made.

The shop is free from all incumbrances; hereafter if any slight repairs or any paintings are required, they must all be done at the charge of the tenant himself; but if the walls happen to be broken down, the bricks, tiles, timber, and stone for repairs are to be furnished by the landlord; for all the rest, hire of labour &c., the tenant is to pay and the landlord shall in no way be accountable. It is agreed and hereby specified, that the term of lease shall be six years, which term being completed the lease shall be renewable at the option of the lessee.

The rent is to be paid quarterly, and punctually as it becomes due. If the tenant engage in any other business (differing from what is above said) the shop shall then revert to its owners. If the rent is not paid when due, it shall be allowable to make up the deficiency from the deposit; and it shall not be lawful on plea that the term of the lease has not expired, to keep possession of the shop while the rent is not paid.

From and after the giving of this lease, the business of the shop shall be lawfully conducted; no contraband goods shall be stored therein, nor shall gamblers resort thither, nor thieves and robbers be concealed there; nor any similar illegalities be permitted; if they be, the landlord shall be at liberty to take back the house, lease it to another, and the tenant shall not by any means retard or prevent his so doing neither shall the tenant underlet the premises to any person.

These are the terms, on which both the landlord and tenant agree, and from which hereafter it shall not be lawful to retract. Whereof I now desiring to afford evidence, prepare this lease, and give it to the tenant of the shop Ye Wo to be kept as a testimony of the agreement.

Written this 10th day of the eleventh month of the twelfth year of Kwong Sui by Kwong of the family who grants this lease of the shop.

光緒十一年十一月初十日 立領舖人黃平的筆

Wong Ping, the tenant (or shopman) who makes this bond, has now received a shop, let to him by Kwong of the family Tsik Hau which is to be opened under the sign Ye Wo and to be employed as a dry goods store.

It is distinctly understood that the rent shall be (Tls 150) one hundred fifty taels each year, whole dollars, according to the balances of the Government; two dollars also shall be paid each year for shoe money; the rent for the intercalary month is to be reckoned the same as that for the other months; and a deposit of two hundred taels is to be made in advance.

The shop is free from all incumbrances. And furthermore, the building having been newly repaired, if any small additional repairs be required they must all be made at the charge of the tenant himself; but if after a lapse of time, the walls become dilapidated, the bricks, tiles, timber, and stone, for repairs, are to be furnished at the landlord's expense. For the rest, the hire of labour &c., the tenant shall be responsible, and shall not be allowed to make any deduction from the rent.

The term of lease is six years, which being completed, the lease may be renewed at the option of the lessee. If the tenant engages in any other business (different from that specified) the shop shall then revert to its owner. If no rent remains unpaid after the lease has expired, then the whole deposit money shall be returned; but if rent is not paid when due, then it shall be lawful to make up the deficiency from the money in deposit; from this there shall be no dissent. The rent shall be punctually paid quarterly when it becomes due, without failure. From and after the giving of this deed the business of the shop shall be lawfully conducted; no contraband goods shall be stored therein, nor shall bands of thieves and gamblers, and such like, assemble or be concealed there.

These are the terms of the lease which have been clearly expressed in person, to which landlord and tenant both agree, and from which hereafter it shall not be lawful to retract. In witness whereof, I now desiring to afford evidence, prepare this deed and give it to Tsik Hau Tong to be kept as a testimony of agreement.

Written this 10th day of the eleventh month in the Twelfth year of Kwong Sui, by Wong Ping, who makes and gives this deed, in testimony of his having received the lease.

Wong Ping.

每年租銀幾多呢 What is the rent for a year?

每年交銀如何交收呢 When the money is to be received yearly, in what manner is it paid?

舖客除交領舖批與舖主, 另設一租部交舖主, 至期憑部收租 Every owner of property who lets a shop, besides the lease received from the tenant, must be furnished with a pass book from him, which he is to keep as a book of rents; on the production of this book, the rent will be paid.

何爲押櫃銀 What is the deposit money?

押櫃者原係包封押於櫃內而不用, 倘有拖欠租項在此扣除 The deposit money is a given sum, folded up and deposited in a chest, and is not to be used, unless the rent is not paid when it becomes due, in which case the rent is to be paid from the deposit money.

何者爲鞋金銀 What is the payment called shoe-money?

收租之人奔走頗多, 故舖客於租項外另加鞋金送與收租之人買鞋, 以謝其往返之勞, 故名鞋金 The person who collects the rent has to travel much; and therefore the tenant, in addition to the rent, must add shoe-money, which he pays over to the collector of the rent for the purchase of shoes, as reward for his trouble in going backwards and forwards; and hence it is 何爲召頂 What is the inviting of purchase?

[called shoe-money.]

召頂者不過召人頂其傢伙, 非頂其舖, 向來有頂手則無押櫃, 因有頂手可以清舊租 To invite persons to purchase is simply the purchasing of fixtures, and not of the shop itself. When the tenant has purchased the fixtures, then there is no necessity for his making a deposit of money. If sold at any time they will liquidate any sum that may be due for rent.

既要舖客納租爲何又要批頭 Why is it, that in addition to the rent, a lease fee is also required from the tenant?

批頭乃是舖之扣頭銀也, 原租舖者有中人說合, 業主亦有管理舖屋之人, 故取一個月批頭銀, 該二人分用 The lease fee is a deduction made from the rent of the shop; when a shop is to be hired, it is necessary to have a medium to propose the contract; the landlord likewise requires some one to take care of his shop, consequently a lease fee equalling one month's rent is taken and divided between those two men.

中外年表

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE CHINESE DYNASTIES, IN WHICH THE DATES ARE HARMONIZED WITH THE CHRISTIAN CHRONOLOGY.

The Chinese nation is a very ancient one, and the fragments of history which are here, given have been taken almost wholly from two historical works, Kang Kien I Chi Lu 綱鑑易知錄 and Ti Wang Nien Piao 帝王年表. Of course, nothing beyond the barest outline of the course of events is possible, in a work like this; and only the attempt has been made, to present the rulers of the successive dynasties in their order, with mention of the first and last emperors in each dynasty, and the cause and method of each change of dynasty. The tables give the name and lineage of each ruler, with the number of years of his reign and the time of its commencement; and the dates are harmonized with the Chronology in use among Western nations. The difficulty of thus harmonizing the dates, and the inaccuracy which would be produced by following the method in use among Chinese historians of the middle period, of sometimes reckoning the same year twice by counting it for both the outgoing and in-coming monarch, and making a difference of some years in the whole period, have been avoided by counting such years only once.

It will be observed that the emperors of the Chow 周 dynasty are designated by two titles one being his own name used as the reigning title, and the other, the dynastic or historical title received after his death. This last title is conferred by the successor of the emperor and the minister, and is expressive of some characteristic of his reign. From the time of the Han 漢 dynasty to the present, it has been the custom for the emperor, on his accession to the throne, to assume a new name, instead of using his own, as a reigning title, and until the Yuan dynasty this reigning title was sometimes changed several times during a reign. Thus an emperor reigning twenty-four years, and changing his title at intervals of four years, would have six different reigning titles during life, though only one dynastic title after death by which to be known in history.

In this book these changing titles, being so numerous, have been omitted from the tables, and only the dynastic, or historical titles inserted; except in the cases of the last and the present dynasties, where both titles have been uniformly inserted; there having been no change of reigning title during these dynasties.

In Yew Ch'ao's time people lived in caves, ate wild fruits, drank the blood of animals, did not cook their food, and covered their loins with the skins of animals. He taught them to build huts of wood or boughs of trees. Sui Jen means "wood from which fire is obtained." He discovered the method of producing fire by rubbing together two pieces of wood. As there was no mode of writing, he made knots in a cord, to serve as a memorandum.

Fu Hi the first of the five emperors, is regarded as the founder of the Chinese empire. His capital was the city Chin Chow, (陳州) in Honan (河南省) province, which city he founded. He invented nets and snares for fishing and hunting, and taught to rear domestic animals. He also first constructed the "eight kwa," (八卦) or diagram used for divining or foretelling future events. A more useful work of his time was the invention by Tsong Chi (倉頡) of characters to express ideas, and the compilation of an almanac. The institution of marriage is also ascribed to Fu Hi.

Shên Nung, the second of the five emperors, removed his capital from Chin Chow of Honan province to the city of Tai fu in Shan Tung province. He taught the people agriculture, established fairs for the sale of agricultural products, and by his observations and experiments on the properties of plants discovered their medical uses; he also wrote treatises on diseases and their remedies.

HISTORICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL SKETCH.

Hwan Ti, the third of these emperors, gave attention to Astronomy, and appointed five observers of the heavenly bodies. They erected high towers for observation; and published the results of the observations and measurements. In the second year of his reign, he directed Ta Nou 大撓, one of the astronomers, to arrange the Cycle, or period of sixty years [Chinese, Hwa Kia Tze] 花甲子 by which the Chinese reckon time.

The Chinese cycle covers a period of sixty years, each year being designated by its own name; which name will of course recur every sixty years and be used during that year. Thus the year 1820 and 1880 are named Keng Shên 庚辰; the years 1821 and 1881, Sin Sze 辛巳, and so on. In order to fix more definitely the date of an event, the year of the emperor in whose reign it took place is mentioned; and for greater accuracy, the month and day are added. In dating letters, only the day, month, and name of year in the cycle are employed; but in the ledgers of business firms also in state papers and legal documents, the name of the reigning emperor is added.

Hwang Ti also ordered one his officer to construct a science of arithmetic and music. Under him many useful arts had their origin and encouragement, such as, wood-working, canoe-building, the making of pottery, of bows and arrows, the construction of carriages, &c. His wife Se Lin Sz 西陵氏 taught the people to rear the silk-worm, and manufacture silk.

Yau the son of Ti Kah, and young brother of Ti Chi, was first of the Chinese sages. Near the beginning of his reign he appointed two astronomers, He 羲 and Ho 和 to adjust the calendar by adding intercalary months, and to divide the year into the four seasons and point out the time of beginning of each. A remarkable plant Ming Ki 蓂莢, or Almanac Plant is said to have grown in his yard. On each of the first fifteen days of the month, a new leaf grew upon it; on each of the last fifteen days, a leaf faded and fell. At the end of a month containing twenty nine days, one leaf would be left upon it.

Owing to the unfitness of Yau's son to succeed to the throne, his father was compelled to seek out some more worthy person; and on inquiry among his several ministers, they all replied "There is a bachelor named Yü Shan, whose father, stepmother, and younger brother are bad persons, and treat him badly; yet all of whom Shan treats in the most filial and fraternal manner." Yau replied that he would summon Shan, and try him by entrusting him with a subordinate office, and by giving him his two daughters in marriage. After a satisfactory trial of three years, he committed the charge of the whole empire into Shan's hands. This arrangement continued for twenty-eight years, when Yau died, having reigned one hundred and two years; and Shan become emperor.

In the sixty-first year of Yau's reign, B.C. 2296 a deluge covered a large part of the country with water, he inquired of his minister who could drain the country. Kwan commenced the task, and laboured at it unsuccessfully for nine years. His son Yü succeeded him in the work. The reign of Yau was characterized by good management, and by devotion to the happiness and prosperity of the people; so that this emperor is held in high and grateful honour by the Chinese.

His successor, Shan, who had already shared in the government for twenty-eight years before himself coming to the throne is held in equal honour. His reign was most beneficent and prosperous. He invited his subjects to make known to him fault, by placing a large writing-tablet at the gate of the place, and also to inform him of any grievance which they might have, by beating a drum in his hearing. He reduced the criminal laws to a code which forms at this day, the basis of the Chinese laws. After reigning thirty-two years, he associated Yü with himself, in the same way as Yau and had taken him for an associate; and having established a hospital for the aged died in the fiftieth year of his reign. His son was not fit to succeed him, and Yü, who had been his associate for eighteen years, and who had proved his capacity by draining the marshes, dividing the lands, and other deeds of orderly administration, succeeded him, thus establishing.

gave him the empire. He had been married only four days when he received the appointment to superintend the work of draining; but he loyally obeyed the call and cheerfully left his family. He was the third of the sages; was a very wise and virtuous man, was very sollicitious for the welfare of the nation, and administered a highly paternal government. His name is greatly venerated throughout the empire. He died at the age of one hundred.

Kieh Kwei was the last of the emperors of the Hia dynasty; and one of the worst. In the thirty-third year of his reign he was persuaded by Chien Leung to invade a neighbouring kingdom, Mung Shan. Yew Shu Sz, the ruler of that kingdom, in order to prevent attack, presented him a very beautiful girl, Mei He 妹喜 who greatly captivated him, and for whom he built a costly dwelling, and with whom he lived a life of luxury and debauchery, gathering multitudes around him and indulging in all excesses. The ministers who remonstrated against this degradation of the government were repelled; one was beheaded, and the proceedings of shame and cruelty growing worse; a noble, Ch'eng Tang, at the request of the people took up arms, attacked and defeated Kieh Kwei 桀癸. He was banished by his conqueror to Nan Chao, where he died in exile. Ch'eng Tang ascended the throne and became the founder of.

Length of Dynasty. 644

Ch'eng Tang, the founder of this dynasty, was the fourth of the sages. He was also called "the well-beloved sovereign," ruling with great benevolence and in a pious spirit. A severe Drought commenced in the first year of his reign and continued seven years. None were reduced to starvation; however, for Ch'eng Tang had stored grain, and gave money freely. Finding that no rain fell, he repaired with his ministers to region of Son Lin, and prayed thus; "Do not destroy the lives of my subjects on account of my incompetence and faultiness." He questioned himself in six particulars, as follows; Is my government carelessly administered? Have my subjects habits of idleness? Are my palace and surroundings too costly? Are my servant too numerous? Am I too lavish of gifts? Do many speak evil of me on account of my faults?" He had hardly finished speaking when the rain descended in torrents. He died at the age of one hundred; and his son having died before him, the sovereignty descended to his grandson.

Chou Sin, the last emperor of this dynasty, was a man of powerful mind, and great shrewdness; but unprincipled and cruel. In the eighth year of his reign he invaded the territory of Yew Soo Sz, who to avert the attack, gave him a beautiful girl, Tan Ke 妲己. Under her influence he gave himself up to luxury and sensual pleasure, and exercised many a species of cruelty. He is said to have built a palace a mile in length and a thousand feet in height; and to have filled it with various expensive curiosities. To defray the expenses he levied heavy taxes. Han Ke was herself exceedingly cruel, and influenced the emperor to adopt more severe and barbarous punishment for offenders, such as holding hot irons in the hands, walking above burning coals on a copper pillar heated and smeared with grease, that the poor victim might fall from it upon the fire, and be burned. The sight of these barbarities seemed to afford Han Ke great delight.

In the eleventh year of his reign he murdered, with his own hands, a lady of high rank who refused to comply with his inordinate desires; ripped open the body of a female, that he might behold the fetus in the womb; and cut off the feet of a person whom he saw walking barefoot in the water in the early winter-morning, that he might see what the marrow in the bones of such a hardy person was made of. One of the princes, Wen Wang, hearing of these enormities, spoke of them, with regret, to one of the ministers, Choang How Foo, who reported the conversation to the emperor; whereupon Wen Wang was thrown into prison for one year, where he wrote a book called Yei Chang 經易 or "Book of Changes" explaining "the eight kwa," or divining figure which Fu Hi had invented, and which Wen Wang 文王 enlarged as well as explained. This book was afterward improved by his son, Chow Kung 周公 after Wen Wang's release from prison, the emperor, at his request, abolished the cruel, punishments which he had instituted, and gave Wen Wang the charge of all military affairs.

In the thirty-second year of his reign, a minister, Mi Tze, reminded the emperor of the badness of his government, but not being heeded the minister left him; another minister, Ke Tze, also admonished him, but was imprisoned; a third, Fe Kan, admonished him yet more sharply. But Chou was angry at the interference, and said, "I have heard that the heart of a sage has seven cavities; you consider yourself a sage." He then immediately ordered Fe Kan to be executed, and his heart torn out, that he might inspect it.

This and similar horrible proceedings incited one of his princes who was in the thirteenth year of his office, Wu Wang 武王, son and successor of Wen Wang, to call a conference of the princes of the different states. They agreed that they would punish the emperor and confirmed the agreement by a solemn oath to Heaven. Hearing of the approach of Wu Wang at the head of an armed force to overthrow him, Chou raised an army of seventy thousand soldiers to resist his approach; but they proved traitorous to his cause, and opened the way for Wu Wang's armies. Finding himself deserted and betrayed, Chou fled to his palace, arrayed himself in his best robes and jewels, set fire to the palace, and perished in the conflagration. His paramour Han Ke, was put to death by Wu Wang; who thus delivered the empire from the rule of this monster of iniquity, and became himself emperor, and the founder of a new dynasty.

At the beginning of this dynasty, the rule was adopted, of giving the emperor a new name at his death, by which name he was to be known in history and in the temple tablet. The rule has been followed ever since, except in the case of Shih Hwang Ti and his son. This name is selected by the succeeding emperor and ministers, and originally had reference to something characteristic in his reign; the guidance and approval of heaven are also sought in the act. Thus the name of Fa 紂, the first ruler of this dynasty, was changed to Wu 武, meaning, "able to remedy trouble and disorder." The word Wang signifies Emperor and is appended to each name. The twelfth emperor of this dynasty, for his unjust rule, received the name Yew 幽, signifying, "what he has done contrary to right."

Wu Wang 武王, the founder of this dynasty, was a descendant of the elder brother of Yau, the first sage. He divided the empire into many states, bestowing them upon the descendants of the sages, and those who aided him in dethroning the cruel emperor Chau Sin. His father, Wen Wang 文王 himself, and his younger brother, Chow Kung are all reckoned as sages by the Chinese. His father, when about to die, gave him the three, following instructions; (1) When there is an opportunity for doing well, do not delay to improve it. (2) When there is occasion for acting, act. (3) Be anxious to correct your own faults, and be indulgent toward others.

Chow Kung, 周公 the younger brother, was a very wise and good man. When Wu Wang died, Chow Kung was regent for four years in place of his nephew, Wu Wang's son who was only thirteen years old. He established the rules of etiquette which are observed to this day, being the author of the Book of Rites 禮記; one of the Chinese classics. He also completed the Book of Changes 易經, which his father had commenced. This book is also a classic. This dynasty is also distinguished by the births, during its continuance, of Confucius, and Mencius.

In the latter part of this dynasty several of the large states, whose rulers were called kings contended among themselves for each other's territory, and were also all of them troublesome to the emperor, by assuming to be independent.

In the fifty ninth year of the reign of Nan Wang, the prince of the state Tsin, Chiu Siang invaded the state Hun, and took the capital, putting to death forty thousand people. He also captured the kingdom Chieu, taking more than twenty cities and killing more than ninety thousand inhabitants. The emperor Nan feared the prince of Tsin because he had acquired so much territory, and therefore sought the aid of other princes against him; but was beaten, and forced to surrender his thirtysix cities and thirty thousand soldiers. He died the same year. The only remaining ruler of this dynasty was Tung Chow Kiün, ruler of a small kingdom in the empire. He maintained his authority for seven years; at the end of which period, he being completely dethroned by Chao Siang Wang 昭襄王, the great grandfather of Shih Hwang Ti 始皇帝, the Chow dynasty came to an end.

For twenty-seven years thereafter, there was no emperor. During this period, the seven large kingdoms contended with each other for the possession of the smaller kingdoms. At length, one of the kingdoms, Tsin, subdued the rest, and the ruler of that kingdom, assuming the name Shih Hwang Ti, became emperor, thus establishing.

HISTORICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL SKETCH.

It was in the twenty-sixth year of his rule over the state of Tsin that Shih Hwang Ti, the founder of this dynasty, became emperor, having brought the whole nation under his sway, and established his capital in Shen Se province. He showed himself a vigorous ruler, making many changes and some innovations. He caused all the arms of the soldiers to be brought to the capital, perhaps as a means of security against any rebellious use of them; and afterwards had them melted to form bells and instruments of music.

In the eighth year of his reign the Great Wall was commenced, the extent and permanence of which have been the wonder of generations. It is 1,500 miles long, from twelve to twenty-four feet high, and is studded at intervals with fortresses and towers. The outer course of stones upon the top of the wall is of white granite. This wall skirts the northern boundary of China proper, crossing hills, valleys, and rivers; and was built, to check the inroads of the fierce and barbarous Tartars. It is said that every third man in the empire was required to work upon it, and that it was constructed in five years, though the emperor did not live to witness its completion. It was built under the supervision of Mung Teen 蒙恬, a brave general who had achieved signal victories the year previous.

This same Mung Teen introduced the Chinese pen, making the handle of wood, instead of bamboo as at present, and using wool as the material for the outside of the brush, and the hair of deer for the inside. Now the inside is constructed of the fur of the rabbit; the outside, of hemp.

A memorable and characteristic act of Shih Hwang Ti's reign was the burning of all the ancient books, except works on agriculture, medicine, and the divining art, the suggestion of his prime minister. He also caused many of the literary men themselves, four hundred and sixty it is said, to be buried alive. The reason for this seems to have been his undervaluing of the ancient teachings and customs, and his anger at those who remonstrated with him on his courses in destroying the ancient writings; even his own son being imprisoned by him, for expressing fears for the safety of the empire because of his destruction of the literary men, and his prohibition of the study of Confucius. He expended large sums in adding to the magnificence of his palace, which was about five hundred feet square, employing seventy thousand subjects in the work. He died while hunting, and his second son, Urh She Hwang Ti, succeeded him.

HISTORICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL SKETCH.

This son proved an unprincipled and cruel monarch, so that the people rose in rebellion against him, and his own ministers proved faithless to him and plotted his death; on hearing which, and at the approach of the executioners, he killed himself.

For five years after this, the possession of the government was contested by the kingdoms Ch'u 楚 and Han 漢, at the end of which time Lew Pang 劉邦, the ruler of Han, was victorious and became the founder of.

Kao Ti, the first emperor of this dynasty, whose original name was Lew Pang, sprang from the common people, and first came into notice as leader of a small army in the rebellion against Urh She Hwang Ti. Having conquered the kingdom of Ch'u, at the close of the five years contest he became sole ruler. He was a man of much kindness, generosity and moderation; all which qualities he displayed during the troubles of the nation, seeking to restore order and to repair the injury done by the anarchy of five years.

HISTORICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL SKETCH.

At one period in this dynasty, the Han family lost the throne for a time, by the usurpation of Wang Mang, regent for the grandson of Süan Ti. But many rebelled against his authority, among whom were two members of the Han family, Lew Heuen 劉縯 and Lew Sew 劉秀, who united with the armies of the districts Sun She and Ping Lin 新市, 平林 to defeat Wang Mang, the usurping emperor. The generals of these armies appointed Gen. Lew Heuen [Hwai Yang Wang] to be emperor after the defeat and death of Wang Mang. He held the office two years, when he was killed by Che Mi.

At the death of Lew Heuen, Lew Sew, a member of the same family, and descendant of King Ti in the sixth generation, came to the throne under the dynastic name of Kwang Wu Ti, signifying "able to retake the ancestral territory, and to remedy trouble and disorder." Thus was founded.

During this dynasty occurred the important event of the introduction of Buddhism into China. In the eighth year of his reign, A. D. 66, Ming Ti, having seen in a dream a giant, sent his brother with a deputation of mandarins to Hindostan, where he heard that a great teacher had arisen.

HISTORICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL SKETCH.

They returned with a Buddhist priest, who brought several books and a large picture of Buddha, which he presented to the emperor. At once the emperor caused a temple to be built in his capital, and from this date the religion of Buddha spread over Eastern Asia; and now its temples are found in all the provincial Cities.

The Chinese historian says of the doctrine, that it teaches to be merciful, forbids taking the life of any creature, and enjoins the cultivation of the spiritual nature, because at death the soul does not die, but in another world may become another person, and in that body receive reward or punishment for the conduct in this life.

In the reign of Hwan Ti, Tsai Lun 蔡倫 originated the manufacture of paper. He beat to a pulp an old fishing net which was made of hemp; he also employed as materials, bark and rags. Before the invention of paper, people wrote on strips of bamboo.

It was during the same dynasty that the system of choosing mandarins from the literati who had passed an examination and obtained a degree, was first introduced. Indeed, the greatest literary men of China are found during this period, which was the golden age of literature in China, and as such, is still gloried in by the nation.

The last of the emperors of this dynasty, Hien Ti, was a weak prince, and not able to hold his throne against the tumults of the age; so that he was compelled to abdicate in favour of Tsao Pe 曹丕, who called his kingdom The Wei kingdom.

At the same time two other kingdoms arose in the empire, called the name of San Kwo 三國—The three States—because the kingdoms Han, Wei, and Woo contended for the imperial crown, and did not acknowledge any one as superior to their respective princes.

From the twenty-fifth year of the Tsin 晉 dynasty the empire contained sixteen smaller kingdoms, which were insubordinate; but in the sixteenth year of the reign of Fei Ti, the second emperor of Sung 宋 dynasty, these were reduced to two, and so remained till the thirty-third year of Wu Ti. of the Leang dynasty; from which time till the tenth year of Süan Ti of the Chin dynasty there were three kingdoms, but not always the same three. At this last-mentioned period there were two kingdoms besides that of Chin, in one of which Yang Chien 楊堅 held high office for three years; he was then appointed prime minister, and having caused the king to vacate the throne, placed himself upon it. Having in time conquered both the remaining kingdoms, he overthrew the Chin dynasty, thus uniting the whole empire of China under his sway. He founded

It was not until the fifth year of the first emperor of this dynasty, Kao Tsu, that the ten insubordinate kingdoms, each with its ruler, which had existed from the twelfth year of the reign of Yang Ti of the last dynasty, were reduced to obedience of Kao Tsu.

The first part of this dynasty is signalized by the invention of the art of printing from blocks, the credit of which is due to Fung Tau 馮道. If any attempts at the art had been made earlier, as has sometimes been said, they do not seem to have attracted the notice of the emperor or to have been brought to practical perfection.

The historian also says, that during this period one T'ang Ming Wang, who was very fond of music, conceived the idea of play-acting; and that selecting more than three hundred young men, he personally instructed them in the theatrical art.

This dynasty was brought to a close by the murder of the emperor by Chü Wan 朱溫, or Chü Chuen Chung, prince of

During the continuance of these five short dynasties, as many as ten small kingdoms were in existence throughout the empire, but on the accession of the next dynasty, these were gradually subdued, with the exception of two or three, and the empire brought to condition of greater unity.

Kung Ti, being very young when he came to the throne, was put under the guardianship of Chieu Kwang Yin 趙匡胤 a man celebrated both as a general and cabinet officer. In obedience to the express wish and admiration of the people, though reluctantly, he accepted the imperial officer; and received a memorial setting forth the fact of the abdication of the young emperor. Thus arose.

In the twelfth year of Ning Tsung, A.D. 1207, the Mongolian Tit Muh Chên 鐵木真 (Genghis Khan), put himself at the head of an army of conquest, and subdued the kingdom Hia 夏. His son and successor conquered Kin, or the eastern Tartars. It would seem, from the history, that the Chinese asked the aid of the Mongolians in driving out the Tartars. Successive Mongol rulers continued their conquests through the reigns of this dynasty, all of which were weak and distracted; and the last three of which were exercised by the young sons of Tu Tsung. The last of these sons, when pursued by the Mongol fleet, jumped overboard rather than be captured. This attack by the fifth Mongolian invader Foo Pe Li 忽必烈 ended the resistance, and was the beginning of

Length of Dynasty 89

The reign of the Mongolian rulers, though very vigorous, and in many respects, salutary (for the empire of China was more than ever enlarged, and the arts and sciences were not neglected), was, nevertheless, felt to be a foreign rule, and was unsatisfying and galling. Though peace was maintained in the empire, and trade flourished, and internal improvements were prosecuted, (for the construction of the Great Canal belonged to this period). the Chinese could not forget that a foreign ruler and a foreign religion had been forced upon them. Dissatisfaction increased; rebellion arose; and when at last the Ming dynasty triumphed, the emperor fled to Ying Ch'ang 應昌 where he died two year after.

The person who brought about this change of dynasty, Chü Yüan Chang 朱元璋 was the son of a poor labourer. It is said that on the night of his birth, people saw a light over his father's house, and they said "Fire has broken out in Chü's house," but on going there no fire was found. His birth took place soon after. When he was seventeen years old, his parents and all his brothers had died. Finding himself very poor and alone in the world, he entered a Buddhist monastery. After the lapse of a month, the supply of food in the monastery grew low; he therefore betook himself to travel in the capacity of a fortune-teller. He pursued this course for three years; then, on returning to the monastery, he was invited, on account of his ability, Kwo Tze Hing, the leader of the rebellion, to a place on his staff. By his valor and wisdom, he soon earned promotion, and became the trusted leader of a party. The country was at that time in a state of great commotion, owing to the dissatisfaction with the Mongol rule; and in the sixteenth year of Shun Ti's reign Chü Yüan Chang captured Nanking, which he afterwards made his capital. He gradually subdued the rival rebellious leaders; and being very generous in his conquests, and wise in the administration of affairs, and withal very modest, became greatly popular. It was therefore easy for him, after having driven the Mongol emperor from the capital, to proclaim himself his successor.

His last great and decisive expedition was the sending of 250,000 troops to the north, under two generals, Tsue Ta 徐達 and Ch'ang Yui Chuen 常遇春 in order to effect the conquest of that region. The Mongol emperor, with his wife fled from the northern capital; his grandson was captured, and Chü Yüan Chang thus had undisputed possession of the empire; becoming the foundr of Early in this dynasty Peking became the capital, under the following circumstances. While the second emperor, Hwei Ti, was traveling in the southern part of his empire, his uncle, Ch'eng Tsu, improved the opportunity of his absence to raise troops and seize the capital city, Nanking. He removed his capital to the north of China and established it at Peking. He improved the city and built the palace, which work was completed in the autumn of the eighteenth year of his reign. In the first month of the next year he occupied the palace, which has continued to be the residence of the emperor to the present time. This dynasty was overthrown by a rebel leaders; Li Tzū Ch'eng 李自成 the most noted and daring of several similar leaders; who conquering one province after another, at last entered the capital through the treachery of a eunuch, who opened the gates of the city. When the emperor saw that he was deserted by his followers he called his family together, and with tears in his eyes exclaimed, "All is lost." He gave orders to his wives and concubines to kill themselves; the empress strangled herself in a private apartment; the emperor, dressed in the imperial robes, hastened to the gates of the city only to find them occupied by the enemy; whereupon he went to the Mí hill 煤山, and strangled himself.

The present dynasty is Manchurian, and arose in this way. Woo San Kwai 吳三桂 the chief military officer of the Ming dynasty, who was stationed at one of the passes leading from China to the foreign countries on the north, hearing that Peking had been taken by Li Tzū Ch'eng, the rebel leader, invited the Manchurians to come and assist him in suppressing the rebellion. They came, and having guns superior to those of the rebel army, were victorious.

HISTORICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL SKETCH.

The successful Manchurian leader, assuming the title Shun Chih 順治 became emperor.

With the change of dynasty came changes of customs. The present style of dress and of wearing the hair is Manchurian. Formerly, looser robes with larger sleeves, were worn; and instead of the shaven head and the cue, the hair being left uncut was done up in a twist on the top of the head.
